

Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 19 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Cloudy in the east but some sunny intervals further west.

Today:

Any mist slowly clearing but leaving a cloudy day in the east. The best of any sunshine across Cornwall but a strong breeze persisting here. Feeling slightly cooler than Saturday. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Tonight:

Cloud slowly lifting through Sunday night, improving visibility at the surface but shrouding the higher ground. Some clear spells may remain to the west of Dartmoor, where it remains breezy. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Monday:

Another cloudy day with the most reliable breaks once again to the west of high ground. The breeze across southern Cornwall continuing through the day, making it feel colder here. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:

Staying settled for Tuesday and Wednesday with an increasing likelihood of some sunshine, though feeling colder with fog and frost in places overnight. Potentially turning more unsettled on Thursday.
